Ought to Paint

I ought to have painted last year, but I had to pay $3 a gallon. I've got to paint this year; it'll take a little more paint; I suppose 1 gallon in 10, and a little more work, I suppose 1 day in 10.

My job would have cost last year about $50; it is going to cost this year $25.

45 gone. I suppose it'll be the same again, if I wait again. What if paint goes down to $1.75 a gallon? $2.50 on the job! I shan't wait; what a fool I was!

Success, my boy, is the aim of all, But to live that joy to the full You want to get there Through the door marked "Push" And not through the door marked "Pull."

The man that hath no music in himself, Nor is not moved with concord of sweet sounds, Is fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoils; The motions of his spirit are dull as night, And his affections dark as Erebus; Let no such man be trusted. Shakespeare, "Merchant of Venice."

CARE FOR ONE'S SELF.

A large majority of the readers of our page are housewives who do their own work. Many of them long for money to spend on physical culture, not seeming to realize that the very best physical culture may be had about the housework. Housework offers exercise for every muscle in the body, and it may be made either a penance or a pleasure, according to the way it is done, and the amount undertaken.

Much of the fatigue of the housewife comes from improper standing and, in fact, too much standing. The body is poorly supported, and where this is the case, a legion of aches and weaknesses will surely follow. All work which is done standing should be done with the chest well up, abdomen drawn in, the back straight and the weight of the body falling on the balls of the feet, the heels touching lightly. When sitting or standing, the body should bend forward from the hips, not the shoulders. Much of the work should be done sitting, and the proper position should be held. With the constantly changing attitude, walking, sitting, stooping, turning and reaching, exercise is given to all parts of the body. There must be deep breathing, and this can not be done with the shoulders drooped forward, and the chest held in. If the worker will take notice, when on her round of duties, she will see all this for herself.

In fact, the home work offers abundant opportunity for good, all-round gymnastic work, and the daughter who pins her faith to physical culture will find plenty of it, and effective, in taking the work of the house off the mother's drooping shoulders, and in the little home "gymnasium" she will find health and beauty, besides relieving her mother from the exercise that has spent her strength throughout long years. It is the dead monotony and the never-endingness of the work that has made of the mother a sorrowful, stoop-shouldered, weary-eyed drudge. Mother has had too much of it, and the daughter should now relieve her in part, at least.

THE WELL-DRESSED BOY.

There is a deal written about togery for the little girl, but it is seldom that the small boy is remembered, and many mothers do not know the rules of correctness and good form that regulate the garb of the boy from the time halcyon raiment in cast until the habiliments of young manhood are assumed. It is a mistake to allow the boy to grow without an especial interest in his wardrobe. The child, whether boy or girl, is very susceptible to early influences, and the little lad who is taught to keep his clothes in order, to be ashamed of a slovenly appearance, and to appreciate the personal pleasure in good grooming and neatness of body attire, will be apt to carry these qualities into later years—after the foppishness of young manhood, natural to youth, has passed.

The 3 or 4 year old boy wears a Russian suit, low belted and with tunic just showing the full bloomer trousers beneath. The little costume may be of linen, of pique, of galates, of corduroy of velvet, of serge, or even—for formal occasions—of pussy willow silk in white or pretty color.

The boy 3 to 5 years just now wears a Dickens suit; a quaint little costume that has replaced the Fauntleroy and the Buster Brown togger of earlier years. The Dickens suit has a plaited waist, not bloused at all, but buttoned down the front with big pearl buttons—very short breeches, in straight, not knicker style. The Dickens suit may be of linen or chambray for warm weather, or pongee or tub silk for dress wear, or of two materials in combination. Brown velvet breeches and a waist of pale blue or sand colored pussy willow silk is a smart combination.

At about 5 years of age the boy, now beginning to lose his baby chubby-ness, dons a regulation sailor suit or serge, duck or mohair, with knickers and loose middie blouse having wide collar opening in a V and the shorter little knicker, the smarter suit.

From 10 to 15 the boy wears knicker suits and a double breasted reefer coat with mannish lapels and a shirt with soft collar and mannish tie. Blon collars are worn by boys of 10 to 12.

The baby boy in his Russian blouse or Dickens suit may wear below his short knickers, or breeches, socks and buttoned strap slippers, if he is a little fellow for his age, but unusually these symbols of baby hood are discarded after the seventh year and replaced with long stockings and button shoes, with very low heels. The larger boy wears at play about leed boots of tan calf, and when formally attired buttoned shoes of dull calf or patent leather. At dancing school or in the home he wears low heeled pumps.

Our idea of a wise man is one who is just a trifle less foolish than the majority.

Peruna Did It for Me.

"I find Peruna an excellent spring and summer medicine and am glad to call the attention of my friends to it. I know by experience that Peruna is a good medicine, and always recommend it whenever I have an opportunity. I can truthfully say that I have no traces of my old complaint, and have neither ache nor pain, and enjoy life. Words cannot express my appreciation for the good Peruna has done me."

PERUNA THE SPRING AND SUMMER MEDICINE.

"I used to get cramps in my stomach. I had sick headaches. My stomach nearly killed me. My family physician only gave me temporary relief. I got out of patience and had given up all hopes of recovery. I then wrote to Dr. Hartman and he advised me to take Peruna. I got a bottle of Peruna and took it. Peruna is my comfort. I will never be without it." Mrs. Thomas M. Morgan, R. D. 2, Waterville, Me.

Mr. Harris L. Elliott, superintendent of the Rumford & Mexico Water District, came very near a serious accident on Monday afternoon. As he was turning into Congress street from Bridge street, the steering gear on his automobile broke, and his machine came back and forth for a short distance with much rapidity. He finally had presence of mind enough to put on the brake, which avoided all further trouble, before any accident had occurred.

William Thomas, the barber, will have for Oquossoc soon to remain during the summer.

The grist mill of Albion B. Burgess on Railroad street was broken into last week and the contents of the safe and two gold watches worth about $100 were stolen. One watch belonged to Mrs. Burgess and the other to Mr. Burgess' son. Fortunately there was no money in the safe. Immediately after reaching the mill and discovering the break Mr. Burgess notified the officers, who think it must have been done by professionals. The safe was turned over on one side and a pick had been used to tear through the bottom of the safe. As the safe weighs over 700 pounds, there must have been at least three men implicated. The burglars were very careful not to make a noise as was shown by the laying of a blanket and a bag of grain for the heavy safe to fall on. The burglars covered their tracks in professional style, as there does not seem to be a clue to work on.

The selectmen have appointed Dr. L. O. Leavitt to the office of milk inspector for the town of Rumford. For some reason there has been no milk inspector in Rumford since Dr. Davis relinquished the position in June of last year.

The petitions are being circulated by Harrie Hall, Leo Abbott, W. W. Goodwin, Mr. Bearbridge of the Oxford Mill, and Henry Gonyea. Onward Rebekah Lodge, of which the deceased was a member, attended in a body. She was also a member of Franklin Grange of Bryant's Pond. Mrs. Swan was the daughter of George W. and Elizabeth (Dineely) Doughty, and was born in Greenwood, October, 1835. Mrs. McKenney has been very ill at a hospital in Melrose, Mass., but is gaining at latest report.

About 8:50 on Thursday evening last the fire department was summoned to extinguish a fire in the building on Prospect avenue owned by Frederick O. Eaton. The ground floor was occupied by Mr. Belanger as a blacksmith's shop, the second floor by Mr. Record as a paint shop, and the third floor as a store house for furniture. The fire started in the paint shop, and on account of the oil, spread rapidly to all parts of the building. Six lines of hose were put into commission and at about ten o'clock the all out alarm was sounded. The paint shop was damaged considerably, but not beyond repair. The mattresses and other bedding in the storeroom were somewhat damaged, but little damage was done to the furniture. The damage to the blacksmith shop was done by water.

VALUABLE DEVICE FOR THE MILK PLANT.

Many operators of milk plants will, in the opinion of specialists of the Department of Agriculture at Washington, D. C., find it profitable to install a recording thermometer and an automatic apparatus for controlling the temperature during pasteurization. When pasteurization is incompletely done, lack of proper temperature control is frequently found to be the cause. Adequate control of the temperature by means of hand valves is difficult and often impossible. On the other hand there are many automatic devices which accomplish this with great accuracy. Their cost is commonly less than $150 and allowing a maximum depreciation of 20 per cent and interest this makes the daily overhead expense for the regulator about 11 cents or less than the value of a man's time for one hour. As a matter of fact, without automatic control, a man has to spend the greater part of his time at the steam valve if the temperature is to be kept within the proper limits. The amount of steam required to operate the automatic device is less than that which would otherwise be wasted.

Frequent variations in temperature, which it is almost impossible to prevent with hand valves, may not only injure the cream line but produce, as well, unsatisfactory results, from the bacteriological and chemical standpoint. For this reason some of the larger cities now require the dealers to put in temperature regulators, and there is reason to believe that others will follow their example in the near future.

The recording thermometer is desirable as a means of self protection, as it provides a record of the temperature of the milk during the whole day's run and thus enables the superintendent to keep a reliable check on the operator at times when he, himself, is not able to be present. In case of any difficulty with customers or health officers the record provides very valuable and convincing evidence. At the present time neither the recording thermometer nor automatic temperature regulator is in as general use as it should be.

THE NEW COAL-TAR EXPLOSIVES.

The remarkable destructive powers of modern guns, which are able in a brief time to wreck the strongest forts, was made possible mainly by the recent discovery of certain new kinds of high explosives derived from coal tar. They are "insensitive"; that is, they are so reluctant to explode that they are as safe to handle as corn meal or baking powder. Shells filled with them can pass through the thickest armor without bursting—withstanding both the shock of impact and the enormous heat generated. Not until the shells have penetrated the armor are they set off by the fuses they carry.

It is that power to penetrate before bursting that gives the projectiles their formidable character as destroyers of permanent structures. When they finally do explode they cause wholesale ruin, for the great volume of gases suddenly set free can make room for itself only by a wide dispersal of the surrounding material, whether it is stone, or cement, or what not.

From coal tar are obtained such substances as benzene and toluene, which, treated with nitric acid, make explosives of the insensitive kind. One of these, called "T. N. T." (short for trinitro toluene), has been largely used by the Germans in the present war for filling shells.

In accounts of the fighting that is now going on in Europe, you read of the use of melinite by the French, and of lyddite by the British. The Japanese, in their recent attack on the Germans in China, used Shimose. All three of these high explosives are one and the same thing; namely, penta acid, which is derived from coal tar, and which is melted and poured into the projectiles.—Prof. Charles E. Munroe, in The Youth's Companion.

POEMS WORTH READING

MOTHER'S DAY.
The Second Sunday in May.
White flowers for Mother's memory.
Bright flowers for Mother's living.

One brave little woman in our broad land,
In a quiet, gentle way,
Picked out a date and set it down
As being "Mother's day."

There always are some scoffers round
Who dearly love to jeer;
They'll say, "Why one day set aside We've mothers all the year."

Yes, so we have; they are quite right,
And that's the very reason
We need a gentle waking up—
For May is Mother's season!

In story, song and epic poem,
We hear the praises rung
Of heroes of great deeds and small,
In each and every tongue.

And do we not regret oftentimes,
Those heroes cannot know
We hold them in such reverence,
Admire and love them so?

Are not our mothers oft as great
In life's heroic birth?
Can we do less than show them, then,
We realize their worth?

This is a whirling, busy world,
But take this one small part
And show your mother, on that day,
The love within your heart.

For can you honestly believe
"Twirl answer up above,
To say, 'I was so busy, I—Why, I forgot to love!'"

So, just remember on May 9:
"This your mother's day."

White flowers soften graves grown hard;
Bright flowers cheer life's way.
Mabel C. Bushnell.

THE MASTER IS COMING.
They said the Master is coming to honor
the town today,
And none can tell at what house or home the Master will choose to stay;

And I thought as my heart beat wild
ly what if He should come to mine,
How would I strive to entertain and
honor the guest divine.

And straight I turned to toiling to make my home more neat, I swept and polished and garnished and decked it with blossoms sweet;
I was troubled for fear the Master might come ere my task was done, I hastened and worked the faster and watched the hurrying sun.

But right in the midst of my duties a woman came to my door;
She had come to tell me her sorrows and my comfort and aid to implore,
And I and I cannot hold her help you any today.

I have greater things to attend to—and the pleader turned away.

But soon there came another—a cripple, thin, pale and gray—
And said: "O let me stop and rest a while in your home, I pray!"

I have traveled far since morning,
I am hungry and faint and weak;
My heart is full of misery, and I can rest and help I seek."

And I said, "I am grieved and sorry, but cannot help you today.
I look for a great and noble guest—
—and the cripple went away.

And the day went onward swiftly and my task was nearly done,
And a finger was over in my heart that the Master to me might come.

And I thought I sprang to meet Him and serve Him with utmost care, When a little child stood by me with fear so thin and spare!

And the marks of tear-drops, and his clothes were tattered and
old,
And a finger was raised and I saw, and the little face was old!

And I said, "I am sorry for you, you are surely in need of care,
But I cannot stop to give it, you must be gone on your way."

And as the words came I swept over the floor and found the little child lying—
He was dead!

And I thought as my heart beat wild
ly what if He should come to mine,
How would I strive to entertain and
honor the guest divine.

I waited till night had deepened, and the Master had not come;
He has entered some other door, I cried, and gladdened some other home.

My labor had been for nothing, and I bowed my head and wept;
My heart was sore with longings; yet,
in spite of it all I slept.

Then the Master stood before me, and his face was grave but fair—
"Three times today I came to your door and craved your pity and care;

Three times you sent me onward, un-helped and uncomfited,
And the blessing you might have had was lost, and your chance to serve has fled."

"O Lord, dear Lord, forgive me! How could I know it was thou?"
My very soul was shamed and bowed in the depths of humility.

And he said, "The sin is pardoned, but the blessing is lost to thee;
For comforting not the least of mine,
ye have failed to comfort me."

THE STARS.
A. W. Stubbins.

The stars are the ornaments of the night;
Some of them reflect but the rays of the sun.

While others we know are the centres of systems
In the fathomless realms of the Infinite one.

Are the worlds that revolve in the far away orbits,
The home of the people not unlike our own?

Do they struggle and strive on those glorious planets?
Will knowledge of these things be ever unknown?

Will imaginative man ever solve the great problems,
That are mysteries still in the regions of space?

For knowledge unfolds to his vision,
The things that so long have been puzzling the race!

The thousands of years we have striving for knowledge,
And change it may seem, yet how little we know!

There are mysteries still all around us and above us;
We know not what makes vegetation to grow.

In the infinite life there is infinite wisdom,
Which man, who is finite, can never attain.

But still there is pleasure, pursuing the knowledge, Although in a lifetime, but little we gain.

Then shine on ye stars in your radiant glory,
Your mystic voice, you may never be heard.

We can well continue his efforts to illuminate
The intricate things which his shed may withhold.

THE NATIONAL CAPITAL

doing in time of peace just what some one in the Navy would have to do in case the United States were at war.
JOHN BABLEYCORN AT WASHING-TON.

It seems to be almost sure that within the next year or two Washington will go "dry." It has been established that a majority in Congress favor prohibition, and had it not required a special rule, while Congress was working at top speed, the last Congress would likely have abolished the saloon as an institution in the National Capital. The liquor interests say that the handwriting is on the wall, and investments in "boozing" establishments are considered poor business in Washington.

Washington is governed by Congress —that is when it is not being misgov-erned. Congress has a hard time finding leisure to fix up the District appropriations, and in providing for administrative facilities. While it passed up local prohibition because it "hadn't the time," it is interesting to discover some of the things that have occupied the attention of the lawmakers on different occasions. Just as an instance is the experience of a souvenir book publisher, who thought his creation should be sold on the stand at the Washington monument. He was told that it would be "impossible," and upon pressing for an explanation discovered that a souvenir stand was permitted at the monument by a special act of Congress, and it was stipulated that only souvenirs of the monument and postal cards could be offered for sale. It was likely a busy day in Congress when the five hundred members of the two houses set up that souvenir stand.

JITNEYS CLOGGED BY RED TAPE.
The jitney bus has been trying to break in on the transportation game in Washington. There is no city more in need of this kind of traffic, as there are all sorts of inaccessible places that cannot be reached in the regular way, and even the "rubber neck wagons" pass up some of the most desirable parts of the city. But it transpires that a jitney bus, according to the laws of Congress, is a transportation company, and therefore it is almost as much of an undertaking to establish a jitney service in Washington, as though it were a small-sized street railway. A big company formed for the purpose of putting in a jitney system, but after an examination of the complicated legal machinery, the promoters decided that the street car interests of the capital might be able to put them, and their industry, out of business. Therefore Washington will likely have no jitney service.

ELECTRIC COMPANIES HAVE A STRANGLE HOLD.
There are two street railway companies running almost parallel lines in the National Capital. They do not exchange transfers, and unless one "knows the ropes" they are obliged to pay two fares on many short trips.
Lighters to the Capital usually use up these protests and profanity when they discover how they are mulcted.
But the street car companies have put their opposition over on the Capital for many years, whereas an ordinary city served with voters back of the local machinery would have remedied the defect years ago. But no one can vote in the District of Columbia. The principal commissioner is before the court trying to prove that he is a resident of the City of Washington—and he is having a hard time doing it. The commissioner is from Texas, the police chief from all parts of the country, and most of the local officials vote in the different states of the nation.

"THE BUCKET OF BLOOD."
Some clever newspaper man wrote a story, and headed it "The bucket of blood." And then he proceeded to conduct a Washington hotel, charging it with a lot of improper practices. The hotel had been in operation so long that the "fourth act of shingles" had started letting in the rain. Now if the newspaper man had said that this hotel, which was perhaps no better or worse than most hosteleries, was a "jar of poison," little attention would have been given the story. It is happily that the hotel was a building purchased by the government, in order to remove the land. Thereupon the bureaucratic government officials were down upon the hotel was run. The officials promptly ordered the tenants to "get out" and they said they would.
Upon the public indignation was aroused. But that was weeks ago, and the hotel is still doing business at the same old stand, and the proprietors are quietly least that "they now have a new lease of life." Perhaps it is all just as well.

PEG O' MY HEART

By J. Hartley Manners

A Comedy of Youth Founded by Mr. Manners on His Great Play of the Same Title—Illustrations—From Photographs of the Play

SYNOPSIS.

Frank O'Connell, young Irish patriot, is shot and wounded by British soldiers while making a home rule speech. He is aided by Angela Kingsnorth, an English society girl, who defends him.

Angela takes O'Connell to her brother's home and helps to nurse him. Her brother, and he and the girl become fast friends. O'Connell when well is sent to jail for disturbing the peace. He finally writes Angela that he has finished his sentence.

O'Connell and Angela wed. She has espoused the Irish cause. Her brother, a member of parliament, is very angry. The happy couple come to America to live. A daughter is born to them. Angela's brother refuses to help the couple in any way. Angela dies.

O'Connell names his daughter Margaret and calls her "Peg." O'Connell receives a most important letter from England, which perplexes him. O'Connell allows Peg to visit England at her uncle's request. The elder Kingsnorth's heart had finally softened toward his dead sister's little girl.

Peg goes to the home of the Chichester family in England at the direction of Mr. Hawkins, Kingsnorth's attorney, as Kingsnorth suddenly dies. She first meets Ethel Chichester and Brent, a married man in love with Ethel. She interrupts them by accident in a secret meeting.

Ethel is enraged at Peg and haughtily dismisses her from the drawing room, sending her to the servants' quarters. The Chichesters have lost their money in a bank failure.

Hawkins arrives and reads the Kingsnorth will. It leaves most of the fortune to Peg and offers liberal pay to any one who will undertake her education and social training.

Mrs. Chichester finally agrees to bring up Peg in return for the money promised, although she openly despises the shabby young girl.

Peg is heartbroken at the cold reception given her by the Chichester family. She is much disappointed, however, by the luxury of her surroundings.

Peg meets Jerry Adair, who takes a lively interest in her. She finds in him a real friend. She tells him about her father. He's a farmer, he says.

Peg decides to return home, but on Jerry's plea she decides to remain in England a month. Brent and Ethel have another meeting. Both are unhappy.

Ethel and Peg have a violent disagreement, and Brent's attentions to the former are the cause of the dispute, which is interrupted by Jerry.

"An' a baby?" "Yes—and a baby." Ethel was not going to betray herself. She would just wait to see what course this creature was going to take with her.

They were now seated together, Ethel holding her little white poodle, at which Peg pointed contemptuously.

Peg went on: "Of course I've never seen the wife or the baby because he never seems to have them with him when he calls here. But I've often heard Alaric ask after them."

"Well?" asked Ethel coldly. "Is it usual for English husbands with babies to kiss other women's hands?" And Peg looked swiftly at her cousin.

Ethel checked an outburst and said quite calmly: "It is a very old and a very respectable custom."

"The devil doubt it but it's old. I'm not so sure about the respect. Why doesn't he kiss me aunt's hand as well?"

Ethel could not control herself much longer. It was becoming unbearable. As she crossed the room she said with as little heat as possible:

"You don't understand."

"Well, but I'm thyin' to," persisted Peg. "That's why I watch ye all the time."

Ethel turned. She was now at bay. "You watch me?"

"Are'n't ye me model?" "It's contemptible!" cried Ethel.

"Sure I only saw the 'old an' respected custom' by accident—when I came in through the door a month ago—once since when I came in again by accident—a few days afterward. I couldn't help seein' it both times. An', as for bein' contemptible, I'm not so sure the custom doesn't deserve all the contempt."

Ethel was now thoroughly aroused. "I suppose it is too much to expect that a child of the common people should understand the customs of decent people."

"Mebbe it is," replied Peg. "But I don't see why the common people should have all the decency an' the aristocracy none."

"It is impossible to talk to you. I was foolish to have stayed here. You don't understand. You never could understand."

Peg interrupted: "Why, I never saw ye excited before—not a bit of color in yer cheeks till now—except twice. Ye look just as ye did when Mr. Brent followed that old an' respected custom on yer hand," cried Peg. The young girl's eyes were ablaze. How vividly she remembered the eventful scene that confronted her when she first arrived at the Chichester home days before!

Ethel answered this time, excitedly and indignantly, giving full and free went to her just anger:

"Be good enough never to speak to me again as long as you're in this house. If I had my way you'd leave it this moment. As it is—as it is!" Her voice rose almost to a scream. Her rage was unbridled.

What more she might have said was checked by the door opening and Jerry showing in.

Jerry walked cheerfully and smilingly into the room and was amazed to find the two young ladies glaring at each other and apparently in the midst of a conflict.

All power of speech left him as he stood looking in amazement at the combatants.

CHAPTER XXII.

The Temple of Friendship. "I came over to ask Mrs. Chichester's permission for you two young ladies to go to a dance to-night. It's just across from here at the Assembly rooms," said Jerry.

Peg beamed joyfully. It was just what she wanted to do. Ethel viewed the suggestion differently.

"It's a kind of you," she said, "but it's quite impossible."

"Oh!" ejaculated Peg. "Impossible?" ejaculated Jerry. "I'm sorry," and Ethel went to the door.

"So am I," replied Jerry regretfully. "I would have given you longer notice only it was made up on the spur of the moment. Don't you think you could?"

"I don't care for dancing. Besides, my head aches."

"What a pity!" exclaimed the disappointed young man. Then he said eagerly, "Do you suppose your mother would allow Miss Margaret to go?"

"I'll ask her," and Ethel left the room.

Peg ran across, stopped the door from closing and called after Ethel: "I didn't mean to hurt ye—indeed I didn't. I wanted to talk to ye—that was all—an' ye made me angry." Ethel disappeared without even turning her head.

Peg came into the room ruefully and sat down on the sofa. She was thoroughly unhappy.

Jerry looked at her a moment, walked over to her and asked her, "What's the matter?"

"One of us girls has been brought up all wrong. I tried to make friends with her just now an' only made her angry, as I do every one in this house whenever I open my mouth."

"Aren't you friends?" "Indeed—indeed—indeed—we're not. None of them are with me."

"What a shame!" "Wait until you hear what me aunt says when ye ask her about the dance!"

"Don't you think she'll let you go?" "No, I do not." She looked at him quizzically for a moment. Then she burst out laughing.

"Misther Jerry, will ye take me all the same if me aunt doesn't consent?" "Why, Peg?" he began astonishedly. "But I haven't got an evenin' dress. Does it matter?"

"Not in the least, but—" "Will this one do?" "It's very charming; still—" "Stains and all?"

"My dear Peg—" "Perhaps they'll rub out. It's the prettiest one me aunt gave me, an' I put it on tonight—because—I thought you—that is, some one might come here an' ye've come!" Suddenly she broke out passionately: "Oh, ye must take me! Ye must! I haven't had a bit of pleasure since I've been here. It will be wonderful. Besides, I would not rest all night with you dancin' over there an' me a prisoner over here."

"Now, Peg," he tried to begin. "It's no use, I tell ye. Ye've got to take me. Are you ashamed of me because I'm ignorant? Are ye?"

"Not a bit," replied Jerry heartily. "I was just the same at your age. I used to scamp at school and shirk at college until I found myself so far behind fellows I despised that I was ashamed. When I went after them and told them I despised them, they passed them."

"Did ye?" cried Peg eagerly. "I will, too," she said.

"Will you?" She nodded vigorously.

"I will—indeed I will. From now on I'll do everything they tell me an' learn everything they teach me if it kills me!"

"I wish you would," he said seriously. "An' when I pass everybody else an' know more than any one ever knew—will ye be very proud of me?"

"Yes, Peg. Even more than I am now."

"Are ye now?" "I am proud to think you are my friend."

"Ye'd ha' won yer wager. We are friends, aren't we?" "I am yours."

"Where I'm yours all right." She looked at him, laughed shyly and pressed her cheeks. He was watching her closely.

"What are you laughing at?" he asked. "Do ye know what Tom Moore wrote about friendship?"

"No. Tell me." Peg sat at the piano and played very softly the prelude to an old Irish song. Jerry said surprisedly, "Oh, so you play?"

"After a fashion. Me father taught me. Me aunt can't hear it. An' the teacher in the house said it was dreadful an' that I must play scales for two years more before I thry a tune. She said I had no ear."

Jerry laughed as he replied, "I think there's very pretty."

"Do ye? Well, watch them an' mebbe ye won't mind me singin' so much. An', after all, ye're only a farmer, aren't ye?"

"Hardly that." And Jerry laughed again.

"This is called 'A Temple to Friendship,'" she explained.

"Indeed?" "An' it's about a girl who built a shrine an' she thought she wanted to put Friendship into it. She thought she wanted Friendship. After awhile she found out her mistake. Listen."

And Peg sang, in a pure, tremulous little voice that vibrated with feeling, the following:

"A temple to Friendship, said Laura enchanted, 'I'll build in this garden—the thought is divine' Her temple was built, and she now only wanted An image of Friendship to place on the shrine."

She flew to a sculptor, who sat down before her A Friendship, the fairest his art could invent; But so cold and so dull that the youthful adorer Saw plainly this was not the idol she meant."

"Oh, never!" she cried, "could I think of enshrining An image whose looks are so joyless and dim. But you little god (Cupid) upon roses reclining, We'll make, if you please, sir, a Friendship of him."

"So the bargain was struck; with the little god ladie's hand she flew to the grove. 'Farewell,' said the sculptor; 'you're not the first maiden Who came but for Friendship and took away—Love.'"

She played the refrain softly after she had finished the song. Gradually the last note died away.

Jerry looked at her in amazement. "Where in the world did you learn that?"

"Me father taught it to me," replied

"I'm sorry. Good night!"

He turned and saw Peg deliberately pointing to the pathway and indicating that he was to meet her there.

Peg, left alone, hurried over to the windows and looked out into the night. The moonlight was streaming full down the path through the trees. In a few moments Peg went to the foot of the stairs and listened. Not hearing anything, she crept upstairs into her own little maids room, found a cloak and some slippers and a hat and just as quietly crept down again into the living room.

She just had time to hide the cloak and hat and slippers on the immense window seat when the door opened and Ethel came into the room. She walked straight to the staircase without looking at Peg and began to mount the stairs.

"Hello, Ethel!" called out Peg, all remembrance of the violent discussion gone in the excitement of the present. "I'm studyin' for an hour. Are ye still angry with me? Won't ye say 'Good night'?" Well, then, I will. Good night, Ethel, an' God bless you."

Peg's little heart beat excitedly. The one thought that beat through her quick brain was:

"Will Jerry come back for me?"

CHAPTER XXIII.

The Dance and Its Sequel.

JERRY met Peg at the foot of the path when he saw all the lights disappear in the house.

They walked across the lawn and meadows on that beautiful July night, with the moon shining down on them.

Once at the great hall his mother put the gaude little Peg at her side, introduced her to the most charming of partners and saw that everything was done to minister to her enjoyment.

It was a wonderful night for Peg. She danced every dance she had the support one with Jerry, she laughed and sang and romped and was the center of all the attention. What might have appeared boldness in another with Peg was just her innocent, wilful, child-like nature. She made a wonderful impression that night and became a general favorite. She wanted it to go on and on and never to stop. When the last waltz was played and encored and the ball was really ended Peg felt a pang of regret such as she had not felt for a long, long time.

"Oh, I am so happy, so happy!" she cried as Jerry led her back to her seat at the conclusion of the last dance.

"I wish I could make the world one great ballroom for you," said Jerry earnestly.

"Do ye?" asked Peg tremulously. "I do."

"With you as me partner, dancin' every dance with me?" "Every one."

"Wouldn't it be beautiful? An' no creepin' back after it all like a thief in the night?"

"No," replied Jerry. "Your own mistress, free to do whatever you wished."

"Oh," she cried impulsively, "wouldn't that be wonderful?"

PLAQUE SUBSIDING.

End of the Foot-and-Mouth Campaign Believed to be in Sight—Chief Danger Now Concealment of Infection.

The announcement that on April 1, for the first time since the appearance of the disease last October, there were no animals known to be affected with the foot-and-mouth disease in the United States, is believed to indicate that the end of the long campaign is in sight. Additional cases are expected from time to time—in fact two new herds were reported from Illinois the morning after the announcement was made—but such cases are regarded as more or less sporadic and if promptly reported can be dealt with before the contagion has had an opportunity to spread widely.

Under the best of circumstances, however, it will be some time before all danger of a new outbreak is over. In sections where the disease has been prevalent the contagion is likely to linger in manure, hay, feeds of various kinds, and on the ground itself. Even after premises where the disease has existed have been thoroughly disinfected it is not considered wise to introduce new stock until at least 60 days have passed.

In the opinion of the authorities, however, the most essential thing now is that there should be no concealed sources of infection. For the information of the public and the stock owners in particular the Department of Agriculture in Washington, D. C., is issuing a revision of its former publications on the pestilence and this pamphlet, known as Farmers' Bulletin 659, "Foot-and-Mouth Disease," will be sent free on application. The bulletin contains among other things a brief description of the symptoms of the disease, in particular the characteristic vesicles which make their appearance in the mouth and about the feet. Although these vesicles are peculiar to the foot-and-mouth disease they soon become ruptured and contaminated by other microorganisms to such an extent that it is frequently difficult to ascertain their original character. There are, moreover, two other diseases common in live stock, known as necrotic stomatitis and mycotic stomatitis, which affect the mouth in a way somewhat similar to the foot-and-mouth disease. For this reason farmers who notice anything suspicious about their stock should report the matter at once and refrain from taking chances which may prove disastrous not only to themselves but to the whole country.

The history of the past six months, however, has done much to educate the public to the importance of dealing promptly with the disease. The first Federal quarantine was declared on October 19, 1914, and since that time more than 140,000 animals have become infected and in consequence have been slaughtered. This loss has been divided very unequally among the 21 States and the District of Columbia, which have been affected. By far the greatest losses have been experienced in those States in which there was a widespread belief that the policy of immediate slaughter of all exposed animals and rigid quarantining of all infected districts was unnecessarily costly and troublesome.

Experience, however, has confirmed the official view that only in this way can the disease ever be eradicated. In certain countries in Europe, notably in Germany, the pestilence has gained such a foothold that the slaughter of exposed animals can not be resorted to and in consequence the widespread prevalence of the pestilence is a perpetual and exhausting drain upon the farmers' resources. In 1911, for example, it was estimated that in Germany there were 3,366,369 cattle, 1,624,927 sheep, 2,553,371 hogs, and 53,674 goats suffering from the disease. Since the total number of these animals in the United States is between three and four times that in Germany the loss to the country would be proportionately greater if the disease were ever to become permanently established here.

Because of the comparatively low death rate the policy of quarantining instead of slaughtering exposed animals has been advocated at various times, and there is no doubt that under certain very favorable conditions this may produce satisfactory results. The disease is so contagious, however, and it may be communicated through so many different channels, that any affected animal is a constant menace to the neighborhood. Moreover, the disappearance of all outward symptoms and the apparent return to health is by no means a guaranty either that the animal may not spread the infection, just as so-called typhoid carriers spread typhoid among human beings, or that at any moment it may not suffer a relapse itself.

Hitherto the comparatively isolated position of the United States has kept it remarkably free from the disease. This is the sixth time that it has visited America, but on each previous occasion it has been successfully stamped out with comparatively insignificant loss. The earliest epidemics can be traced to the importation of foreign animals. Such importations, however, are now permitted only from countries in which it is certain that foot-and-mouth disease does not exist, so the danger from this source may be said to have been eliminated. The epidemics of 1902 and 1908 were caused by the importation of vaccine from Japan, which had in some way become contaminated with the infection. This vaccine is also believed to have been closed by legislation and administrative regulations.

A Weak, Nervous Sufferer Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Kasota, Minn.—"I am glad to say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done more for me than anything else, and I had the best physician here. I was so weak and nervous that I could not do my work and suffered with pains low down in my right side for a year or more. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now I feel like a different person. I believe there is nothing like Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for weak women and young girls, and I would be glad if it could influence anyone to try the medicine, for I know it will do all and much more than it is claimed to do."—Mrs. CLARA FRANKLIN, R. F. D. No. 1, Maplecrest Farm, Kasota, Minn.

Women who suffer from these distressing ills peculiar to their sex should be convinced of the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health by the many genuine and truthful testimonials we are constantly publishing in the newspapers.

The origin of the present outbreak, which is by far the most serious that the country has ever experienced, is still unknown. It has been ascertained, however, that the germ found its way into southern Michigan and that skimmed milk from infected cows was returned by a creamery to be fed to hogs. The hogs in turn were stricken and a shipment passing through Chicago infected the pens in the stockyards. Other shipments of livestock passing through these pens carried the disease to States as far apart as Washington and Massachusetts. The South and Southwest escaped because practically the whole movement of stock was away from and not into these sections.

After the discovery of the existence of the disease the first effort on the part of the authorities was to trace all the shipments from Chicago, round up and slaughter the exposed stock, and quarantine the sections into which they had been taken. These measures appeared to check effectively the spread of the disease, but they inevitably caused much disturbance and indirect loss to farmers and stockmen. As soon as the conditions appeared to warrant it, therefore, a more general movement of live stock was permitted. It was found, however, that in certain instances shipments of stock from sections where the disease has been prevalent spread the contagion once more and it became necessary to institute fresh quarantines in a number of sections. Opposition to the policy of immediate slaughter also developed in some States, hindering and delaying the work of killing the exposed animals. This opposition, however, has now disappeared with the result that the disease is more thoroughly under control than at any previous time.

BOYS' CONFERENCE

Inspiring Services at Norway May 1 and 2

The Boys' Conference of Oxford County held their second annual meeting at Norway last Saturday and Sunday with 125 delegates present. The weather did not dampen the enthusiasm of the boys and the meetings were very helpful and inspiring.

Delegates arriving from various parts of the county were met at the trains and taken to their places of entertainment. Headquarters were at Norway Congregational Church, but the conference opened with a banquet at Norway Grange Hall, Friday evening. About 150 were seated at the tables. Music was provided by the Norway High School Orchestra. Hon. A. J. Stearns acted as toastmaster for the exercises which followed. Welcome was extended from the boys by Howard Chick of Norway and Richard Millett of South Paris; from the churches by Rev. Messrs. Bruce and Nichols of Norway, McWhorter, Miller and Spear of South Paris; from the business men by E. N. Swett of Norway. Response for the boys was given by Lester E. Henry of Rumford, president of the 1913 conference, and for the leaders by John E. Stephens of Rumford. An address on "Manhood" by Orlando E. Frost of Belfast closed the program. All the speeches were brief, and the session closed about 9.30.

Saturday forenoon was very fully occupied with a program beginning at 9.30 with a song service, and quiet hour led by Rev. J. M. Arters of Rumford. At the business session the following officers were chosen, and were immediately introduced and took charge of the proceedings:

Pres.—Cecil G. Swett, Andover.
Vice Pres.—Clement Wood, South Paris; Everett Shea, Rumford; Howard Chick, Norway; Harris Hamlin, Bethel.
Sec.—Barton Byron, Rumford.
Asst. Sec.—Lester Thurston, Andover.

As one of the features of the forenoon program there was a report on "What One Boys' Club has Accomplished," given by Cecil G. Swett and Victor H. Akers of Andover, who described the work done in a year and a half by their club, on the principle of "helping the other fellow," including the younger boys, whom they had assisted in organizing. An excellent address on "Symmetrical Manhood" was given by C. C. Hatfield of New York, and another on "Community Work" by Archie P. Winter of Kennebunk, with discussions led by A. A. Heald of Waterville, and participated in freely.

Vivian Akers of Norway took the Conference photograph at noon in front of the Congregational Church where the meetings had been held. During the afternoon the boys visited the shoe factory, the toy factory, and the hat factory at South Paris. Owing to the rain there was no baseball out a basket ball game was played at the High School and the High School boys gave a tumbling exhibition.

R. B. Nelles of Greenville Junction took the devotional service at the Saturday evening session. An illustrated address on the topic, "Among Country Boys," was to have been given by Mr. Hatfield, but he was called away in the afternoon. The slides were used, and A. A. Heald substituted as lecturer, giving an account of the organized work being done among country boys in various states of the Union under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association.

The boys attended church and Sunday school with their respective hosts. Luncheon and two conference sessions were held later. In the afternoon a closing address was given by R. B. Nelles, at a meeting for men and boys held at the Congregational church.

During the final session, which was held at Norway Opera House. All the delegates united, and the house was greatly filled. Resolutions of thanks to all who had assisted were adopted. The minutes of the evening were an address by Mr. A. A. Heald, state secretary of the Y. M. C. A., on the work of the Association. This was accompanied with lantern slides, illustrating all phases of the campaign in city and country. Mr. Nelles closed the meeting with a final address.

The boys attended church and Sunday school with their respective hosts. Luncheon and two conference sessions were held later. In the afternoon a closing address was given by R. B. Nelles, at a meeting for men and boys held at the Congregational church.

The Adventures of a Boy Scout, a five part photo-drama showing the nation wide organization at work will be given under the auspices of the Men's Club at ODEON HALL, MAY 14.

"The Adventures of a Boy Scout" is a remarkable photo play and traces the practical value of the Scout movement in upbuilding youthful character. The work of the Boy Scouts in all its aspects is illustrated by a series of descriptive episodes in which the daily routine of the organization is shown; their drills, their uniforms in action; ministering first aid to the injured; their spirit de corps; their ability to attack depredators and wrongdoers; their powers of defense.

Operations such as scaling walls, the rescue and care of wounded, the protection of property, are among the highlights of the film. The Boy Scouts' adventures coincide with a human interest story which points the moral that every boy is a potential asset to his country, that manliness, courage and chivalry always win out.

WHO IS BEING BOBBED?

The railroads have been put frequent statements concerning way mail pay. These general statements from Chairman Peters of the Island Railroad. Mr. Peters' statements are intended to prove that railroads are being underpaid, and consequently that the government is robbing them. To all sorts of this kind, Postmaster General D. replies with counter statements attempting to prove that the government is getting the worst of it. The hands of the railroads. The railway mail pay has been in excess for twenty-five years. One why some definite basis of pay has been arrived at that would be the railroads and the government been the attitude of the railroads attempting to manipulate political Chairman Peters can get his down to a point where they are to present a clean case to the of the United States, it is reasonable to suppose that the roads will get justice. But the policy of the railroads and the master General continues to rest the theory that this is a political rather than an economic question, no tical results are likely to be attained.

HUGHES AND THE PRESIDENCY
Associate Justice Charles E. Hughes has issued a statement declaring he has "no desire to re-enter public life" and as a member of the Supreme Court he is not available. In Mr. Hughes has put a damper upon movement to run him for president the republican ticket. Mr. Hughes has an enviable record as governor of New York, and a small minority of people who are "looking for the best" are Hughes enthusiasts. However, there is no warmth among the republicans in the suggestion of Hughes as a candidate. This is for the simple reason that Hughes is generally regarded as something of an idealist and he provokes about as much enthusiasm as a missionary at a Sunday school game. There are no real candidates for the republican nomination for presidency, but many people are looking what Roosevelt, LaFollette, Minn, Borah, Burton and Whitman tend to do about it.

LINCOLN TALKS ON TIPS

Robert T. Lincoln, chairman of the board of directors of the Pullman company, has declared his belief that tipping of Pullman porters would continue even if the pay of $27.50 a month should be increased. Mr. Lincoln testified before the United States commission on Industrial Relations that the wage system for porters was inadequate one, and that it had given him considerable annoyance. The gentleman is the son of Abraham Lincoln.

A PROVOKING LOT.

The fighting Europeans are a provoking lot, and some people are saying that the United States has no foreign policy since our attitude with the warring nations has been such as to let us to dodge the trouble, and let combatants fight it out among themselves.

THE CASE OF HUERTA.

While we are "watchfully waiting" to see what happens in Europe, President Huerta, of Mexico, has apparently settled down in the United States, and for some reason there has been a sort of spontaneous enthusiasm for the old Mexican who caused us so much trouble in Mexico. Chairman Depew has made known the fact that he is still among the living by declaring that Huerta is the "oldest Mexican alive." The inference of this may seem to have been intended to encourage many other enthusiasts who have previously been disappointed.

CLEANING SLATES.

Washington officials are cleaning their desks to order that they may have time to see Harding's circus, attend the fashionable horse show, or go fishing, auto riding or trips to the beach spots as these fall. There is a general tendency to "clean up" the work, since Washington is surrounded by the advent of the straw hat and summer raiment that the hot weather approaches.
